Among the satisfactions of a Bank Account...

It's reassuring to watch savings grow... to have your bank book record your progress.

You feel more secure with your money safe and readily available when you need it.

It's a comforting feeling to have cash on hand for opportunities, emergencies.

Multiply by 9,200,000 deposit accounts the satisfactions you enjoy from your bank account. The grand total of comfort, security and peace of mind shows, better than a dollar total, the essential value of a bank account. More deposit accounts than there are adult Canadians, with new accounts opening every day, reflects the confidence of the nation in the chartered banks.

WORTHY CAUSE

Boy Scout financial campaign launched by lieut.-governor

An opportunity to contribute to a worthy cause is being given Saskatchewan residents with the launching this week of the Boy Scout financial campaign, designed to provide funds to aid the Boy Scout Association in its work. Mr. J. S. Ink of Regina is chairman of the drive.

The campaign in all communities where there are Boy Scout groups is dated for September 20 to 25, but donations to the cause are not limited within these dates. They can be made up to the end of the month or later.

Wherever there is a local Scout group, this group will be spearheading the local campaign. But the many thousands of Saskatchewan people who are not reached in this way and who want to support the Boy Scout Financial Campaign financially, can do so by sending their donations to: The Boy Scout Association, 104 Gordon Building, Regina, Sask. No contribution too small or too large say the sponsors.

Canada's Boy Scouts and Cubs of today are this country's leaders of tomorrow. The Scout organization is one of the best known, and most capable, for teaching self re-

Balance and leadership to young boys.

Membership of Boy Scouts, Cubs and Leaders in Saskatchewan totals more than 66,000. There are 172 Scout groups sponsoring Scouting in this province, and there are 121 Scout troops, 142 Cub packs and four Rover crews in operation.

Funds from the campaign now under way will help defray expenses of Leader training, new Scout group organization and maintenance of the provincial field staff and office.

The Lieutenant-governor of Saskatchewan officially launched the campaign over the radio network. Lending vocal support also will be Premier T. C. Douglas, Bishop Coleman, Archbishop O'Neill, Father Murray and others.

Scouting is fun and adventure for your boy and other boys. Scouting is training and character building for all boys. Support the Boy Scouts' financial campaign in your community, or direct to the Regina headquarters.

Home Workshop

Repairing chairs offers a generous reward to anyone who likes to putter with tools. Second hand stores often have a good assortment of solid frames that need only to be re-upholstered and refinished to make them like new, such as the modern piece above. And what household does not have a chair or a couch with one or more springs that need only to be re-tied to make the chair as serviceable as when new? Pattern 312 gives illustrated directions for re-webbing and re-tying springs; cutting upholstery fabrics and the stitching processes. Pattern carries pictures of ten types of outmoded frames and how to alter them into up-to-date pieces. Ask for pattern 312 and enclose 35c with name and address.

These decoys are made by sawing out pieces traced from a pattern. Then the pieces are glued up with water-proof glue and the solid piece is shaped and smoothed with a rasp. The next and last step is to follow the painting directions on the pattern to produce a realistic effect that will not only fool other ducks but other hunters. The heads may be turned in different ways for naturalness. As a caution to you hunters we suggest that you make a few extras for wives who want to use them for lamp bases and other decorative purposes. The pattern for making these decoys is No. 404 which is 35c per copy. This number is included in the Sportsman's Packet of five full size patterns for $1.50 postpaid.

Blacksmith at 89 still going strong

STONEWALL, MAN.—They're as durable as any anvil, these village blacksmiths.

Steve Fell of Stonewall has been blacksmithing for 74 of his 89 years. But ask him about retiring and he says: "Not for me. I may be a little tired but I like to work."

Fifty-eight years ago, when he started his business in this village 20 miles north of Winnipeg, there was competition to worry about, but not any more.

"The machinery fellows tried to put us out of business," he says. "There were six blacksmiths in town when I started. Somehow I managed to last out."

Since he settled in Stonewall the only time Mr. Fell has been away from his anvil was a brief spell in 1934 when he got kicked while shoeing a horse.

"I was only in hospital three weeks," he says. "I have wonderful vitality."

Mr. Fell in his youth did plenty of travelling in following his trade.

"Now I never even go to Winnipeg. There are too many cars. I'm liable to get run over. I used to walk to the city often during the horse and buggy days."

Will film life in Metis colony

PRINCE ALBERT.—Life in a Northern Saskatchewan Metis colony will be the subject of a forthcoming documentary sequence to be filmed by the National Film Board.

This was announced here recently by provincial resources department officials, who said the sequence would constitute part of a documentary series on Canadian life produced for Odeon theatres across Canada by the NFB entitled "Eyewitnesses".

The Metis colony sequence of the documentary, which will be seen by theatre-goers early next year, will illustrate various aspects of the province's Metis rehabilitation program, recognized as the most advanced in Canada.

Victor F. Valentine, the provincial resources department's anthropologist, will act as consultant for the NFB unit filming the sequence.

The official said the NFB felt a film on the Metis would be of particular interest to Canadians, generally, since the Metis played an important role in the country's early development.

Natural cork defies efforts to produce something better

Workmen stripping a cork tree of its precious bark

—Central Press Canadian,

By HARRY LUND
(CPC Correspondent)

LISBON, Portugal.—The next cork you take out of a bottle probably came from this small Iberian country west of Spain, which produces half of the world's supply. Cork is a relatively new industry but age makes it go. One of its best markets is the United States. There is nothing young about cork. The evergreen oak which produces it doesn't yield much until 30 years of age. Its first supply is called "virgin" cork, which is only good for tanning. After it the trees go on producing this compressive, elastic product for about 120 years.

Naturally these oaks are precious and are not used for anything else. They are first skinned when 20 years old, by experts who strip the outer bark from selected trees. The cork is hauled to town by horses, placed on trains for a port and then shipped around the world. It's valuable, too.

The trees are about 30 feet high and also are cultivated in Spain. Their outer layer by annual additions from within gradually becomes that soft, homogeneous mass which is cork. Every nine or

Survey reveals surplus of men in Canada

Prospects for women in search of a man are better than five years ago. For every female in the country at the beginning of June this year there was a male, and 198,000 to spare.

The bureau of statistics has just issued an estimate that at the beginning of the month so popular with brides there were 7,683,000 males and 7,485,000 females.

In Canada, of course, there's always been a surplus of men. At the start of June a year ago there were 7,281,300 women and 7,474,700 men—or 193,400 extra men. Away back in 1901, the male majority was 112,900.

The smallest margin in almost 50 years turned up in the 1951 census which showed a mere 164,400 spares. Since then however the male population has increased by 608,600 and the female by 565,000. In 1951 Quebec was the only province showing a majority of women. This year, men were more abundant in every province.

The current figures do not include the Yukon nor the Northwest territories.

But the bureau gives no information for women who want to know how to make the best of their advantage. It has a cooling note for them: between the ages of 25 and 34, and over 74, there were more women than men. It gave no figures.

Crippled girl writes with head

A little crippled girl in a Mon-treal hospital has learned to write with her head.

A year ago she entered the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children paralyzed so badly she was unable to use her hands or any of her muscles except those in her neck.

Today, with a specially designed apparatus fitted to her head and with the help of her neck muscles, she can write, paint or draw as she wishes.

The hospital, asking that her name not be divulged, identified the girl only as Mary.

The apparatus, designed for her by a member of the hospital staff, is made of plastic and resembles a telephone operator's headset.

Attached to this headset is a protruding arm which holds either a pencil or paint brush. With a table and paper fixed firmly in front of her, Mary manoeuvres the arm with her neck muscles.

However it was only after many months of extensive physiotherapy that Mary learned how to write. At first the seriousness of her paralysis and Mary's mental distress added complications to her condition.

Gradually the nurses gained her confidence and Mary slowly regained a little power in her weakened muscles.

It was only after a noticeable improvement in Mary's condition that she was given the writing apparatus.

A lesson from the British Empire and Commonwealth Games

One of the big lessons which can be learned from the recent British Empire and Commonwealth Games is that hard work pays off. This was demonstrated quite vividly every time an English middle distance runner stepped on to the track to compete.

The physical capacity needed for unusual performance can only be developed by hard work. However, this hard work must be full of variety, proper rest periods and conducted with a thorough understanding of how the body operates. When the athlete is physically educated, he develops confidence. The athlete anxious to develop full endurance and power must be willing to forego the idea that hard work will "burn him out"; he must learn the knack of effort; he must learn to move through the mental block of thinking he is through when he feels tired.

It is important to remember the toughest opponent an athlete has to beat is himself. He must constantly be aware of the traps his mind sets for him and how easy it is to find a reason to let up and postpone the big effort. He must learn to be honest and not to justify or alibi his failures, because each time this happens it is easier to let up the next time.

This principle of training can be applied to all sports. So go to work today and apply it to your sport.

Place it — don't drop it

Most football kickers make the bad mistake of dropping the ball toward the ground and then kicking it. You must place the ball on your foot as follows: Once your grip is secure, hold the ball waist high and then place it on your foot with the front end of the ball turned slightly to the left.

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

CHURCH-HOME IDEAL IS STILL VITAL

When we look back on the origins of the Christian church, we are reminded that the churches, in various places where the missionary journeys of Paul and others led to their establishment, were in the homes of the disciples. Saint Paul, in greeting Priscilla and Aquila, says, "Likewise greet the church that is in the house."

A church could not very well be maintained in a home without the family being a part of it, and family religion is strongly exemplified in the experiences of these early Christians.

The home and family, therefore, were of great importance in the beginnings of the Christian church. Their status suggests very clearly what ought to be the relationship between the church and the home, between Christian belief and practice and family life, at all times, and in all places.

However, one must realize without any undue pessimism that in most, if not in all, communities today the facts and conditions regarding church and home are very different from those that the New Testament records.

In the great multitude of cases, such strictly Christian homes are perhaps the exception, even where there is profession of Christian faith. To mention one example: For good or bad, the rule of parents in the home is no longer what it was in those early Christian homes.

And present-day conditions create new difficulties, as families are not often together as they once were.

But the ideal, implicit in Christian faith and teaching, and in the close association of home and church in the days of early Christianity, still remains.

PRISCILLA'S POP—Fathers are so handy

Courageous Toronto girl started to swim at age nine

A summer in the city, instead of at the usual country vacation spot, gave Marilyn Bell, an unathletic nine-year-old, her start towards aquatic fame. The little girl who at 16 years of age became the first person ever to swim Lake Ontario, was consoled for her stay-at-home holiday by a season ticket to Oakwood swimming pool.

It was an unconscious investment in a great future by Mr. and Mrs. Syd Bell. Both non-swimmers, they didn't dream their tot's splashes in the little pool would mount to a tidal wave of swimming achievement.

The trim high school student has built up some mighty swimming muscles in her eight years of training, but they hardly show when she is in the water.

Marilyn is a pretty, blue-eyed blonde, five feet and one-inch tall, with a friendly, pleasant personality and not much time for boys.

She weighs 119 pounds, has a few freckles and a beautiful golden tan. She plays badminton during the winter and on Sundays sings in the church choir.

Swimming Lake Ontario was the second marathon for Marilyn this summer. The first was a 25-mile effort in July off Atlantic City, in swirling ocean tides.

She was the seventh swimmer to finish in that race—but she was the first girl, and in the fans' estimation, the outstanding performer of the day.

They had lined the course and cheered her along in her 10-hour grind. Only courage, training and terrific determination and pabulum pulled her through, said her coach, Gus Ryder.

Yes, pabulum. The food of infants nourishes powerful long-distance swimmers who can't leave the water to eat. It is easily digestible, and along with such food as corn syrup, gives quick energy.

Even though she was a big hit with the American crowd of 100,-

000 at Atlantic City, her win for Canada was generally unappreciated by her home town. She arrived at Malton airport and found not a single official waiting to greet her.

It didn't bother the unassuming youngster, but it was a disappointment to her coach, who said it was the old story of Canadian talent never getting a break from Canadians.

Three hours before the Atlantic City Swim ended, said Marilyn afterwards, "I felt just a little bit discouraged."

"I felt as though I had been swimming all my life and every time I brought my head up I saw the same old things, the sky, the spray and then just the darkness of the water again."

But, discouraged or not, the youngest of the 39 swimmers kept on to pick up $1,150 in prize money.

For the past six years Ryder has been her coach. It was Ryder who decided Marilyn should try the lake swim. Her parents left it up to him.

If you would be on the mountain, you must consent to pass over the road to it.—H. C. Trumbull.

Funny and Otherwise

"Now let's talk about you, shall we?" said the pretty film star.

"All right, dear."

"Well, then, what does a young man like you see in a girl like me?"

Prisoner—"The judge sent me here for the rest of my life."

A bride and bridegroom came down to breakfast in the hotel where they had spent the first night of their honeymoon.

"Now, be casual and offhand and they won't know we're new-lows," cautioned the groom.

While he studied the menu, his bride gave her order to the waiter. "Tea and toast without butter, please."

Whereupon her husband exclaimed in a voice everyone in the place could hear: "Good Heavens, is that all you eat for breakfast?"

"Can I borrow your pen, Bob?"

"Certainly."

"Got a sheet of writing-paper I can use?"

"Yes. Help yourself."

On The Side • By E. V. Durling

Over 15 years ago a United States inventor originated an automobile that could run forward, backwards and sideways. The sideways angle seemed the solution to tough parking problems. However, autoists didn't go for this car because of a fear that the mechanism might get out of order and cause the car to go sideways while speeding forward on a highway.

How to slow down a dog

Gambling on greyhound races is legal on and off the course in Great Britain. In Britain there is no income tax on money acquired by gambling. Consequently, the temptation to wager there is very great. The temptation is also great to go in for a bit of skullduggery in the way of fixing races. Do you know how some greyhound races are fixed? The fields in these races usually consist of six dogs. The fixers arrange to slow down the dogs likely to be the first three choices and then they bet on the three longshots. It is not necessary to dope a greyhound to slow the animal down. All that is necessary is to feed him a hard boiled egg a little before the race.

She didn't marry

"I have never married," writes a feminine subscriber. "Never wanted to. I enjoy my liberty too much. I am never bored. I have fun. I have put a 'Mrs.' in front of my name and purchased a wedding ring. This is to stop other women from constantly asking me why I am not married. I pose as a divorcee. A very gay divorcee. Too many women are driven too quickly into marriage because they cannot bear to have other women ask them why they are not married and referring to them as old maids."

Music hall comedienne

Who introduced that lively ditty titled "A Little of What You Fancy Does You Good?" The answer is, of course, Marie Lloyd, the most popular British music hall comedienne of all time. Marie's real name was Matilda Alice Victoria Wood. Was one of 11 children. Had three brothers and seven sisters. Married three times. One of her husbands was Bernard Dillon, celebrated jockey, who rode the Epsom Derby winner, Lemberg, in 1910. Marie Lloyd, a successful entertainer for 36 years, was generous to a fault and is believed to have given away at least a half a million dollars to needy friends. She died at 52 in 1922. Over 200,000 people attended her funeral!

Export

That "export or die" thought remains firmly rooted in the minds of the British. Now they are even exporting houses. Yes, sir, you can have a bungalow made to order in Britain and shipped C.O.D. to just about any place in the world. Will be a completely equipped dwelling which can be erected and made ready to move into in two days or less. Don't know the tariff situation on imported houses, but do know British construction workers are paid about one-third those similarly engaged in Canada or the U.S. Suppose Japan starts building and exporting houses. Japanese building construction workers are paid less than $1 a day!

Island of oomph girls

Three women for every man. And the women all beautiful. Well, nearly all. That is reported to be the state of affairs on the Caribbean isle of Guanaja. With airline service what it is, a young fellow could leave Manhattan today and be in Guanaja tomorrow surrounded by lovely "oomph girls," flashing come-hither eyes at him. However, a warning is in order. These Guanaja glamor cuties want to marry and settle down. One fellow, who went to Guanaja in search of feminine companionship, found it to the extent that he is now the father of 15 children!

Ideal family

What is the ideal family as to make up and numbers? It was once considered to be a family of four, mother, father, son and daughter. Now it appears the family of six has become the most desirable. That is, mother, father, two boys and two girls. This, however, is a rare type of family. It seldom works out that way. If there are four children they will be all girls, or all boys or three boys and a girl, but hardly ever two boys and two girls.

PRIVILEGED

We would not touch the blossoms
Which in another's garden grow;
We would not twist the blooms about
Nor push them to and fro.

We would not pick the flowers
Another person tends with care;
Though we admire their beauty
We leave them growing there.

Yet the wind with gentle motion
May touch each treasured flower
And set them all a-swinging
Through every sunlit hour.

The wind may pluck a flower
From a garden anywhere
Unmindful of the owner
Or of his endless care.

The wind in wrathful fury
Cares not which way it goes.
It scatters far the petals
Of the daisy or the rose.

It may bend the heavy blossoms,
Or snaps off a slender stalk,
And leave a trail of brightness
Across a garden walk.

Helpful Hints

To stop any annoying squeaks rub the hinges, drawers and the like with a little soft soap.

If starched clothes are on the line when it rains, allow them to remain until they are dry and the stiffness will stay in the clothes.

An old coffee pot is an excellent container for the paraffin. When paraffin is taken off a glass or jar, merely throw it into the pot. When wanted for use, melt the paraffin and pour.

To remove stubborn marks from wallpaper, if the marks cannot be removed with cleaner, moisten a piece of the same design paper, brush off some of the color with a small paint brush dipped in water, and apply to the mark.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

Holiday from happiness

By RUTH K. KENT

EVERYONE wants happiness. I thought I had a corner on it the day I married George Hayden. I loved him more than is sensible, and he returned every bit of it with gentle interest. We had everything in common and loved being together. And Mother Hayden practically cinched it when she said, "Georgie, we must see that Lola is very happy."

Those were no idle words. The first thing she did was to sell her home and moved into an apartment across the street. "Now I'll be near if you need me," she said. I did need her, too. Not to help George make me happy, as she seemed to mean, but to advise me with cooking and household details. I became very fond of her.

That was until George was offered a summer job as a research chemist up at the Square Deal mine. I went up to the mountains with him the day he looked over the situation. We looked at the living quarters . . . a few shacks along the river, with plenty to offer in the way of scenery but nothing in conveniences. I could see that George was a little unhappy about it, that he was hesitating about the job that he wanted so badly on account of the living conditions for me. So I put my hand over his and said, "It won't matter, honey. You'll be there, won't you?"

He knew what I meant, so he accepted the position. When we got home we went right over to tell Mother Hayden. "Why, Georgie," she gasped, "Surely you aren't going to ask this girl to live in a place like that."

George looked puzzled, but I said, "I'm going to like it. You can't imagine the gorgeous scenery."

"Scenery," she sniffed. "That's just like you, my dear. Sweet and sacrificing. But I promised I'd see that Georgie makes you happy, and I'll certainly do it."

"But gee whiz, mother," George started . . . She took the reins, "Lola can stay right here and I'll look after her. I guess you can stand to be separated four months. 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder,'" she smiled.

There was no use arguing, but I jumped all over George the minute we got home. I'm not staying here. I'm going with you." Burying himself in his newspaper, he shook his head, "Mother is right. That's no place to take a woman."

I got into bed and muffled my sobs. I pretended to be sleeping when George came to bed. We'd never quarrelled before and I knew everything inside of me was dying. It was obvious he didn't want me and I pretended sleep when he got up. But he shook me gently. "I've decided I may as well pack and go today. The longer I wait the harder it will be."

"I don't care when you go," George took me in his arms. "Mother will look after you, honey. Or I wouldn't leave you. Mother's right, I have no right to take you there."

I had to be satisfied with that. All next week his mother was kindness itself to me. But her sweet, prying interest wore me down. I sat through a movie three times rather than go home.

One morning she came over with a couple of suitcases. "I've sort of neglected you, my dear," she went to the guest room. "So I am going to move right in here while George is away. Then you won't have to go out so much to cover your loneliness."

I watched her hang clothes in the closet. "I won't stay here," I said, "I'm going up to George." I intended to say it aloud, but the words didn't come. I flounced into my room and started packing.

"I'm going over for some more clothes," Mother Hayden called.

I called back, "You shouldn't carry those heavy bags."

Her voice was always cheerful. "I like doing things for myself."

I went on folding dresses. She could live here alone this summer, she'd enjoy a house for a change. I felt I was doing her a favor by moving out. I didn't know how George was going to take it but I just had to go. Just making the decision made me feel better and I started singing.

Then I heard the thump. I heard Mother Hayden calling. "Lola . . . Lola . . ." I ran to the door and saw her lying at the bottom of the steps. She gasped, "I did something to my leg. Don't move it."

The doctor came right away. "Her ankle is broken," he said, "I'll have to put it into a cast." She looked horrified. "I'll have to stay in bed?"

He nodded, "For a little while. We'll take you to the hospital."

She started to cry. "I can't bear hospitals." I felt sick and funny inside. If I had offered to carry the suitcases for her this wouldn't have happened. I couldn't help thinking how good she'd been to me. And I couldn't help thinking, now she's going to the hospital, I can go to George.

She clutched my hand. "Lola, hospitals make me sick."

I said, "You can stay right here." Then I thought, what am I saying? I want to go up to George, not stay here and be a nurse. But I looked at her tears. "I'll take care of you, mother."

She wiped her eyes. "I'll stay here if you'll let me, but I won't let you wait on me. Georgie would never forgive me."

"Georgie" has nothing to say about it," I said. "He went off and left me, didn't he?"

"Because I told him to," she said.

I stared at her. Then I said, "I'm not a very good nurse, mother, so I'll get a practical nurse to look after you. That suit you?" She puzzled a little, then nodded, "That will be fine. I'd die being a burden to you."

"You won't be," I grinned. "The nurse will have to use my room so I'll go up and live with George, where I belong."

She frowned. "I guess you're right. But, my dear, you'll never be happy in that terrible place."

George met the bus, after I wired him, and said the same thing. "Honey, it's been rugged without you but you'll never be happy here."

I clung to him. "I don't want to be happy," I cried, "I just want to be with you."

BEGINS TRAINING AS FLYING NURSE

CHILLIWACK, B.C. — Vicki Swanson, 18-year-old Chilliwack girl, determined to be a flying nurse, has been granted her pilot's license and has begun three years training at St. Paul's Hospital. Then she will spend one year in the University of B.C. to get a public health degree.

Altogether, she spent 30 hours in the air—12 dual and 18 solo—to get her license. "It was loads of fun," she said.

Her father, a pilot since 1947, who took her up for the first time, said he thought Vicki was possibly the only girl in Canada who learned to fly before learning to drive a car. "She didn't even know what a choke was," he said.

Scientists estimate that the average depth of the ocean is 13,000 feet.

Steady rise in Canada's population

Canada's population is more than eight percent higher than the 1951 census figure and now is well over 15,000,000. At June 1 the population was estimated by the bureau of statistics at 15,195,000. This was a 414,000 gain over the previous year, 1,186,000 over the 1951 census figure and 3,123,000 over June 1, 1945.

Ontario's population passed the 5,000,000 mark for the first time, pacing the nine provinces that showed increases. Prince Edward Island recorded the only decline, falling to 105,000 from 106,000 the previous year.

By provinces the increases were: Ontario up 149,000 to 5,046,000; Quebec up 119,000 to 4,388,000; Alberta up 37,000 to 1,039,000; British Columbia up 36,000 to 1,266,000; Manitoba up 19,000 to 828,000; Saskatchewan up 17,000 to 878,000; New Brunswick up 11,000 to 547,000; Nova Scotia up 10,000 to 673,000, and Newfoundland up 15,000 to 298,000.

In the territories the Yukon recorded a rise of 1,000 to 10,000 and the Northwest Territories a similar increase to 17,000.

The population estimates are made by adding births and immigrant arrivals to the census total and deducting deaths and an estimate of emigration. The birth rate has been rising and the death rate falling while more people have been coming to Canada since the Second World War than have left.

LIVESTOCK MARKETING BOARD COSTS

Is a Livestock Marketing Board worth over two and one half million dollars per year? The Western Stock Growers' Association reports that had a Board been in operation in Alberta in 1953 this is what it could have cost the producers of Alberta.

The legislation being advocated provides for the establishment of a fund to be utilized in such manner as may be deemed necessary or advisable by the Board, which is another way of asking for authority to impose a tax on every head of livestock marketed over and above normal marketing charges with no assurance of how the money will be disposed of or guarantee of any price increase. Assuming that this tax had been 2% of the total value of the animals sold, as is presently being advocated in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, the Board in 1953 would have cost

Alberta producers $2,836,716.00 of which cattlemen would have contributed $1,466,857 on 585,310 head, or over $2.50 per head marketed.

HAND—ME-DOWNS

Handing down shoes from one child to another may be the cause of foot troubles later on. Each child's feet are individual feet—the shoes that are "broken in" to fit the one child may be quite unsuitable for another youngster, even though the length of the feet may be approximately the same. Children's feet change size as often as every two months and this should be taken into consideration when shopping for shoes.

BEAUTY BASE

The general contour of the face is influenced largely by the shape of the jaw which, in turn is dependent to a great extent upon the teeth. Crooked, protruding or misshapen teeth cause the mouth and jaw to become distorted, a condition often due to neglect of dental care in childhood. Regular visits to the dentist should start when a youngster is three years of age. At that time dental cavities may be repaired and malformation of the mouth or jaw, caused by faulty tooth development, can be more easily treated.

CARE OF DIRTY HANDS

The coating of grease or dirt that often collects on the hands of industrial workers should be removed by means which will not injure the skin. Many of the hand cleaners used have a harsh mineral base and this causes forms of dermatitis or skin disease. Strong solvents such as turpentine, alcohol, naphtha or abrasive such as cornmeal, wood-gasoline are also too strong to be used on the hands. It is much safer and usually just as efficient to use mild soap and a vegetable road between Montreal and Que-

a proud RECORD

Service has been the motivating force of the Alberta Wheat Pool since its inception 31 years ago. Built on this sound foundation the organization has been outstandingly useful to Alberta's grain producers and has made steady growth.

Today the Alberta Wheat Pool operates a system of 507 country elevators and has terminals at Vancouver and Port Arthur, all owned by Alberta's grain producers.

Besides giving producers unequalled service and protection, the Pool's financial accomplishments on their behalf have been substantial. From the initial investment of $8½ million made by members in the early years of the organization, the following has been achieved:

Paid cash patronage dividends.....	$ 6,250,000
Purchased reserves in cash.....	9,140,000
Paid interests on reserves (1923-29).....	630,000
Acquired property at a cost of.....	18,200,000
Built up a working capital of.....	4,800,000
Repaid, with interest, 1929 overpayment.....	8,700,000

The record of the Alberta Wheat Pool is one of which grain producers who are the owners of the organization may be justly proud. The Alberta Wheat Pool organization has proven that it is worthy of the continued loyalty of Alberta farmers.
